

Politics of the Low Countries

- Unique academic journal on Political Sciences in Belgium and The Netherlands
- Offers a mix of scientific articles, facts and figures on politics in the Low Countries
- Aiming for societal and international academic impact
- The articles are double blind peer reviewed
- English as publishing language, but the editorial board welcomes Dutch or French manuscripts in the reviewing process

We are happy to announce that Res Publica, the long-standing academic journal on Political Sciences in Flanders and The Netherlands, is changing its cover name to Politics of the Low Countries. This transition is accompanied by a switch from Dutch to English as publishing language. In this way, the journal articles will be open to a more diverse public of readers and researchers who are interested in the politics of Belgium and The Netherlands.

Scope of the Journal

The journal will primarily offer scientific articles but also facts and figures about the political situation in Belgium and The Netherlands. By broadening our scope, the board of editors hopes to better link in with new trends in international research and to benefit from the many opportunities that comparative politics has to offer.

Call for Articles

The first issue of Politics of the Low Countries will be published at the beginning of 2019. Therefore, we now launch a call to hand in articles for publication in this brand new edition of the journal. The quality of the journal rests assured since all future submissions continue to be subjected to a double blind peer review process. To submit an article, please contact: politicslc@boomdenhaag.nl.

Editorial Board Members
